In the modern world, TV systems occupy an important place in the construction of video surveillance systems, and the possibilities that modern TV monitors have can be truly endless. The DS-2CD416P/DW416Q/DIP NVR series monitors can handle any task assigned to them. LCD monitors are distinguished by high image quality, a wide range of functions, ease of use and, of course, allow you to control the system through various interfaces. New resolutions and types of cameras supported by monitors allow you to view images of the highest quality, which is important when building complex surveillance systems. Also, the functionality allows you to use different types of cameras to work as part of video systems of varying complexity. In addition, the monitors have a high-quality performance and decent value for money. The LCD series of IP monitors became one of the most popular and widespread on the market in 2012. Their advantages: the ability to work through existing interfaces (Ethernet and IEEE802.3af / x) for complex video surveillance systems; a wide range of models with processors that support work in new generation networks with a high level of security; high image quality; the ability to perform additional image analytics.
